The Scottish Heart Health Extended Survey. To determine the association between eating behaviours, physical activity and weight on risk of developing insulin resistance (metabolic syndrome X) or Type 2 diabetes. A cross-sectional, population-based study of 4076 adults (aged 25-64 years, response rate 66%) in the north-west of Scotland. The presence of metabolic syndrome was defined by the joint occurrence of high blood pressure, low HDL cholesterol, high TAG, high plasma glucose, high BMI and high waist circumference. The presence of insulin resistance was defined by the presence of high plasma glucose (≥ 6.1 mmol/l) and the presence of Type 2 diabetes by the reporting of a doctor's diagnosis. Of the participants, 806 (20%) had metabolic syndrome and 595 (15%) developed Type 2 diabetes. In multiple logistic regression analysis, the odds of having metabolic syndrome increased in the presence of a high-risk physical activity score, an active food preference, and a high dietary intake of meat, fat and sugar. The odds of having Type 2 diabetes increased in the presence of a
