"I'll be retired for about 10 years," said Ms. Van Horn, who is 76 and works as a graphic designer for the Pittsburgh Parks Conservancy. Her retirement is a fact of life for thousands of people who work in Pennsylvania's anthracite coalfields, once the world's largest and wealthiest coal-mining industry. For about a century, shepherds led sheep past the Van Horn Manor -- built in 1914, about 15 minutes east of the city -- so coal miners could see a beautiful view of the Monongahela River and just above, the mountains of West Virginia's western panhandle. Now coal mineworkers have a view of Southwestern Pennsylvania, which is where the coal industry is headed for the next 40 years. Anthracite has gone from the heart of the nation's cheapest energy to a niche product used for such things as

Notes Category:Starbound mods Conversion of a chloroplast-specific gene promoter into a homologous nuclear-encoded glyceraldehyde-3-phosphate dehydrogenase gene promoter. Three transforming plasmids have been constructed which enable the in vitro cloning of foreign genes into the chloroplast genome of Chlamydomonas reinhardtii. Clones which contain the glyceraldehyde-3-phosphate dehydrogenase gene promoter (gpd) cDNA operon of Chlamydomonas reinhardtii chloroplast genome are able to direct chloroplast-specific expression and are stable. Transformed plants grow normally, although the transformation frequency is less than 1%. The transformed plants show decreased activity of the nuclear glyceraldehyde-3-phosphate dehydrogenase gene promoter (gpd) so that the nuclear-encoded mutant is no longer expressed in the chloroplast. The results demonstrate the suitability of this procedure for chloroplast transformation. B-Rae said she hoped the new money would help her as she attempts to keep busy while her husband is awaiting trial on child sex charges. "My situation in life is that I'm alone, so this will help me not worry so much about everything. All the money will help me to not have to worry about anything else," B-Rae said. "All I want to do is to live and keep on going." The woman who was victimized then again gave the cash to the Salvation Army to put it to use. "My husband was arrested in March 2010. He was charged in August 2010. He's due in court on January 8, 2011," B-Rae said. "I just want to be busy, get my life in order, and keep on going so I don't sit around and think." Self-perceived social support as a risk factor for substance abuse. A report of a number of studies suggested that subjective social support tends to attenuate the risk of various forms of psychopathological and addictive behavior. However, it is still unclear whether the strength and pattern of association between perceived social support and the risk of substance abuse (i.e., abuse of cigarettes, alcohol, or other substances) differs depending on different measures of social support.
